

Translation page for VenCo Intl

At VenCo International we provide language translation services for Chinese Simplified and Traditional, English, French, German, Japanese, Korean and Spanish. While most source materials are in English, we can also translate into English from these languages.

We work with linguists who are native speakers, have at least ten years of translation experience, and are specialists in their respective fields. We do not cut corners; the right language team is assigned to your project based on subject matter, language, volume, and target audience.

Translation is the process of converting written text from a source language into a target language. It requires that the full meaning of the source be accurately rendered into the target, with special attention to cultural nuance and style. A cogent example of the complexity of language is seen in the idiomatic expression which is unique to regions and dialects and eludes literal translation. The meaning of the expression "to kick the bucket" is very different from its literal translation and requires that the human translator have a mastery of both the source and target languages.

Four components comprise the translation process. The basic stage of translation, editing, proofreading and review, a unique team of project coordinators and managers working together who are native speakers of the target language, a single point of contact for every project and a focus on cultural branding and understanding of your language needs.

We use CAT (computer aided translation tools) when necessary to ensure consistency and to save our clients time and money on all projects. These tools are used to analyze content, provide word counts, and to determine the levels of repetitive text. Translation memories are created to leverage this knowledge on future projects. But the actual translation is always performed by a human being with the appropriate experience and proficiency.

We provide document language translation services in the following industries: medical, education, legal, financial, manufacturing, high-tech, and travel and hospitality.

Please contact us for a free quote at luis.esquivel@vencointl.com.